Chief,

A couple of days ago, I was in the 52-4 court ago with a client. After his arraignment, he was ordered to get fingerprinted. So I accompanied him over to the PD to guide him through the process.

After the process was completed I left, headed home. Once I got there, my client called and explained about the continuation of his bad day. Because, in walking out to his car, he discovered he had a flat tire. He didn't have a jack or lug wrench, so he asked if I could return to the PD and lend a hand. I agreed.

Once I got there, I found one of the service aides, Steve Boussie, had lent him a jack and wrench from the motor pool. Steve waited patiently while my client changed his car's tire.

So I write to for two reasons: First, to express my appreciation to Steve for lending a hand. He didn't have to. It's a testament of the quality of the TPD that your staff was willing to lend a hand rather than making my client call a tow truck. Second, I want to thank you for running a department in which Mr. Boussie was allowed to help. I've seen departments that, unless there was a crime committed or a public danger, they would not lend a hand. My client was very appreciative for the help.

So, again, thanks to you and Mr. Boussie for making TPD a great department.

- John
