6. STUDY ITEM – ONE FAMILY HOUSING OPTION

Mr. Apahidean presented a PowerPoint presentation on the City’s diverse demographics and the changes in the housing market with respect to millennials and empty nesters. He said the presentation is to stimulate discussion on how to effectively incentivize developers/builders to construct smaller homes, both in site developments and individual ownership.

Mr. Apahidean introduced a concept that would utilize variable restrictions on zoning regulations as a tool to incentivize developers/builders to build smaller homes. He presented visual examples of homes constructed with current zoning regulations in comparison to construction of homes utilizing variable zoning regulations as relates to setbacks, lot size, etc. Mr. Apahidean noted some developers have built smaller ranches but the price per square foot is not within an affordable price range for empty nesters or millennials.

There was discussion on:

- Cluster option; incentives, density, tweaking.
- Small/large home mix; changes character and integrity of neighborhood.
- Require developer to build smaller homes at a lesser dollar per square foot.
- Desirability to retain quality homes.
- Lessen green space to encourage smaller floor plan.
- Use of long narrow lots to create unique neighborhoods.

Messrs. Carlisle and Savidant said they would take into consideration tonight’s comments and come back with some ideas; as well, look into extending an invitation to a home builder to do a presentation to the Board.
